Six months of uncertainty: the cyclone season has begun!

Officially opened on June 1, the cyclone season will rhythm the lives of the inhabitants of the Caribbean until November 30, depending on the waves, depressions, and tropical storms or hurricanes... This year, however, is expected to be less active than previous ones. But history has shown: it is not the number of phenomena that is to be feared, but the intensity of the one that will make landfall... and that, only Mother Nature will decide.

On the beginning of June, there is a rather rare consensus among the main cyclone forecasting agencies: the 2026 season in the Atlantic is expected to be near normal, or even slightly below, contrary to the particularly active seasons observed in recent years. According to Neil Jacobs, administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), there is a 55% chance of a below-normal season, a 35% chance of a near-normal season, and only a 10% chance of a season more intense than average. The various compiled forecasts generally mention between 6 and 16 named storms, 3 to 9 hurricanes, and 1 to 4 major hurricanes, with a majority of the models positioned in the lower part of these ranges.

WHY A LESS ACTIVE SEASON?

According to meteorologists, this more moderate cyclone activity can primarily be explained by the effect of El Niño. This climatic phenomenon, particularly intense this year, directly influences the formation of cyclones and hurricanes in both oceans. In the Atlantic, it will generate greater wind shear at higher altitudes as well as drier air, which are not conducive to hurricane development. Conversely, in the Pacific, the season could prove to be particularly active. Experts also estimate that this El Niño episode could be one of the strongest observed in over a century. The European Centre for Medium-Range Weather Forecasts even mentions the possibility of a «Super El Niño.» Despite generally reassuring forecasts, several concerning signals lead specialists to urge populations to remain vigilant and prepared.

VIGILANCE FOR THE CARIBBEAN

Météo-France Antilles has notably highlighted that the 2025 cyclone season was well below the average of the last twenty years, with a notable absence of systems during the statistical peak in early September. However, the ratio of major hurricanes to the total number of observed phenomena was particularly high. The most striking example remains Hurricane Melissa, which ravaged Jamaica with winds nearing 300 km/h. The 2025 season thus reminds us that generally low statistics can mask catastrophic local realities. Recent studies indeed show that climate change favors more intense rainfall, more frequent rapid intensification events, as well as a potentially higher proportion of very powerful phenomena. The Caribbean Sea, with surface temperatures ranging between 27.5°C and 30°C, now constitutes a reservoir of energy particularly favorable for the strengthening of Category 4 or 5 hurricanes. According to the Caribbean Regional Climate Centre (CariCOF), this persistent heat in the tropical Atlantic could also promote extreme weather events in several sectors of the Caribbean, with increased risks of heavy rainfall, flash floods, but also prolonged drought in certain islands of the Lesser Antilles.

As always, seasonal forecasts carry a significant degree of uncertainty. A generally less active season does not mean that the Caribbean Arc will be spared from a major phenomenon. As forecasters regularly remind us: one hurricane is enough to permanently disrupt a territory.

Junk Car: a free and eco-friendly solution

Verde-SXM has just signed a partnership with Valor Auto to strengthen the local processing chain for End-of-Life Vehicles (ELVs). A concrete advancement for the environment, and a completely free solution for all individuals who no longer know what to do with their old vehicle.

Announced on May 27th, this new partnership adds to the existing collaborations with the eco-organization Recycler Mon Véhicule, thereby strengthening Verde-SXM's ability to offer local and responsible solutions for the management of end-of-life vehicles. As an authorized center, the company ensures compliance with environmental and regulatory requirements, from the removal of the vehicle to its destruction and recycling. A complete, regulated, and environmentally friendly process. For the island's residents, it also guarantees that their actions directly contribute to reducing the impact of automotive waste on the territory.

In practical terms, the process is simple, quick, and 100% free. The individual submits their request on the platform recyclermonvehicule.fr. Verde-SXM then contacts them, organizes the vehicle removal, and handles all administrative formalities and legal documents, including the Cerfa certificate. No fees, no administrative complexity. The vehicle must simply be clean, accessible, and emptied of personal belongings. Once taken care of, up to 98% of materials are recycled or recovered: metals, plastics, batteries, tires, and other components are directed to specialized channels to limit landfill and promote the circular economy. The remainder is subject to energy recovery. A rigorous process designed to ensure that no end-of-life vehicle becomes just another waste on the territory.

Red Cross: eight days of quest, solidarity all year round

For its 92nd national campaign, launched on May 23, the Red Cross mobilized all its members across France and in the overseas territories until May 31. In a challenging socio-economic context, the Marigot delegation took advantage of this week to raise funds, but also to promote its field actions carried out throughout the year.

Adrien, Sabrina, and Manon (Members of the Red Cross)

It consists of retirees with modest incomes, isolated parents, without health coverage, facing administrative, social, medical, or financial difficulties. Ordinary profiles, often invisible, that the Red Cross of Marigot meets daily. "We don't wait for people to ask for help; we go to see them," says Sabrina Habbab, head of the Mobile Social Intervention Team (EMIS). Twice a week, her teams go out into the different neighborhoods of the island to talk, create connections, identify distress situations, and guide people toward existing assistance. For some, isolated and without support, the team goes further: it helps to put an administrative situation in order, to restore rights, and to reconnect with complex processes. Additionally, the Marigot house, located in Concordia, opens its doors every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday for daytime reception, providing essential goods, sanitary facilities, a meal, and of course, companionship. Because whether they are volunteers or employees, the goal of all members of the Red Cross remains the same: to support, help, and lend a hand. "These are life stories whose journeys are not so different from others," shares Sabrina, who experiences this commitment as "an incredible human experience." The EMIS also runs the Health Bus, a mobile medical unit deployed year-round across the territory. Open to all, with no documents required or fees, it offers basic medical consultations but also conducts screenings for diabetes, hypertension, or HIV. "I work with the Red Cross on this initiative because it aligns more with the human values of my profession," says Manon, a nurse on the Health Bus.

The social assessments conducted during each intervention also feed into the Territorial Social Needs Observatory, a tool that allows the association to adjust its actions to the realities on the ground.

A CALL FOR DONATIONS AND VOLUNTEERING

These National Days highlight a commitment that lasts all year round. Like Muriel, a recent retiree, who now dedicates her time to helping people in difficulty untangle their administrative situations: requests for assistance, compiling files... Or Solange, who, with a smile on her face, organizes the meals for the daytime reception each week and invests herself tirelessly with the most vulnerable.

As for Yolène, a professional rescuer with multiple roles, she orchestrates the Marigot house daily. Because here, solidarity is not a matter of exception; it's a matter of neighborliness. The Red Cross is making a call for donations — money, clothing, essential goods — but also for vocations. "Everyone can help, with their skills or even just with their kindness."

Saint Martin, Guardian of Memory

The Old House of Quartier d'Orléans hosted, on Thursday, May 28, the commemoration of the 178th anniversary of the abolition of slavery in Saint-Martin. Elected officials, representatives from the economic, social, cultural, and associative sectors gathered to honor the memory of those who suffered from slavery.

The ceremony began to the sound of the conch shell, played by Latisha Stephen, co-founder of the Soualiwomen Kultural Association, at the historic Old House site, in front of the ruins of the old sugar mill. A place that was not chosen by chance: these stones carry within them the memory of those who experienced the deprivation of freedom. 178 years after the abolition of slavery, the Community, in the presence of the Prefecture, chose this historically significant site to remind us that this date remains a major milestone, but also an invitation to remain collectively mobilized for human rights and the values of freedom, equality, and fraternity, in a world still plagued by forms of servitude. The elected representatives of the territorial youth council opened the ceremony with dialogues recalling the importance of memory, before Amira Ottley sang a cappella the anthem O Sweet St Martin's Land, while La Marseillaise was later performed on the steel pan. President Louis Mussington and Prefect Cyrille Le Vély then spoke solemnly to remind us of the collective responsibility imposed by the history of slavery. The ceremony concluded with a moment of reflection.

THE OLD HOUSE, SCENE AND MEMORY

After the moment of reflection, it was time for culture. The president of the culture commission, Valérie Damaseau, opened this section by discussing the great figures of the Orléans neighborhood and the history of this iconic place. The voice of Audrey Claxton, supported by the choreography of the Company Ö and Co, then brought memory to life. Poems by Jocelyne Arnell and Saby Soualiga followed, along with songs from the students of Charlotte Brookson School, from Vocal Lab of Natisha Hanson, and from Pianissimo, before the Grain d'or troupe closed the ceremony with a dance. Throughout the day, the Soualiwomen Kultural Association, in traditional attire, prepared Journey Cakes over a wood fire: a gesture rooted in time, to keep the memory alive. S.M

Fish Day : meeting the fishermen and the flavors of the sea

One of the most popular and iconic events on the island, Fish Day, pays tribute to the island's fishermen, traditional fishing, and the flavors of the sea. Its 24th edition will take place on Sunday, June 7, from 10 AM to 10 PM in the Galisbay parking lot.

Today essential, Fish Day has its origins in a much more modest initiative. In the 1990s, the Cultural Association of Women from Rambaud-Saint-Louis, under the leadership of Laurelle "Yaya" Richards, had the habit of preparing dishes for the fishermen of Cul-de-Sac during a friendly day. A simple way to celebrate the sea, those who live from it, and ancestral culinary traditions. With the support of the Community, the event, long held in Cul-de-Sac, has gradually found its place on the calendar and now takes place in the parking lot of Galisbay.

Much more than a culinary festival, Fish Day has become a true family and popular gathering centered around the maritime identity of the territory. Every year, people come together to discover or rediscover local specialties at the many stands offering grilled fish, fried snapper, court-bouillon, fish colombo, accras, conch... A true showcase of seafood products that are presented and cooked in all their forms, highlighting traditional recipes and local flavors.

Fish Day is also an opportunity to remind everyone of the essential role of fishermen in the economy and culture of Saint Martin and to pass on to the younger generations a heritage deeply rooted in the island's history. Activities, crafts, and concerts will punctuate this festive day, which will continue until 10 PM in a friendly and musical atmosphere. A.B

Words to Accompany the First Days of Motherhood

On Friday, May 29, fourteen paintings were donated to the maternity ward of the Louis-Constant Fleming hospital. These works were created by a group of young mothers to bring comfort to the women who, in turn, will stay in these rooms after giving birth.

A PROJECT BORN FROM MUTUAL SUPPORT

Beyond the paintings, this initiative is primarily based on a story of connection. During the Covid period, exchanges between midwives and young parents notably took the form of WhatsApp groups. This dynamic of mutual support continued thanks to Éléa, who gathered several moms who gave birth between December 2025 and April 2026. «I felt very alone during my pregnancy, far from my family. I thought that together, we would be stronger,» she confides. A group then formed, and every Thursday these women meet with their babies. A gathering that allows them to share, of course, about their child but also about all the changes that motherhood has brought to their daily lives.

TOWARD A MOTHERS' ASSOCIATION

Two days before Mother's Day, at the maternity ward, new frames have appeared. In total, fourteen paintings, one for each room, will soon adorn the walls of the hospital service. An initiative born within room 14, explains Noémie, «I had this project after my delivery and I thought, why not propose it to other moms.» Jenny, Luna, Anaëlle, Éléa, and Agathe then join the adventure. «I took care of the design and I asked the moms to focus on the message they wanted to convey,» details the young woman. Inside each frame, kind phrases written in French, English, and Spanish, to bring comfort to future mothers in the hospital.

A project that has helped create friendships and strengthen the bonds among these young women. All hope that this initiative will not remain isolated. Éléa would like to go further by creating an association that lasts even when their children are older. «The goal is not for it to be something ephemeral. I want to sustain a club and have a real turnover so that it doesn't get stuck in one generation,» she explains. For now, these fourteen paintings already testify to the strength of the collective, and all hope that these few words hung on the walls remind future moms that despite the many challenges they will face as parents, they are not alone.

Firefighters' Ball: « Burning Flammes »

For the first time this year, the Saint-Martin Firefighters' Association will hold its traditional ball within the Savane Fire Station.

The Bal des Pompiers is an iconic French tradition that has its roots in history. It was indeed established in 1880, the year when July 14 was declared National Day by the Third Republic. It was the Parisian firefighters who first had the idea of opening the doors of their fire station to the local residents to share a friendly moment after the military parade. The idea quickly caught on, and gradually the tradition was established in towns and villages wherever there was a fire station. Today it has become an unmissable event, the evening before or on the day of the national holiday. The Saint-Martin Firefighters' Association has decided this year to organize it according to this tradition within the very fire station, in place of the trucks (which will not be far, as they are always ready to respond to an emergency if needed), which should give it a very special atmosphere. Especially since the evening, themed «Burning Flames,» promises to be hot and suggests some surprises. A raffle and a refreshment stand will of course be on the agenda, and the evening will be partly animated by DJ Lil R live. You can already save the date, July 13 starting at 7 PM, and buy your ticket now: €20 in advance with a drink and a raffle ticket (note that it will be €30 at the door on the day for entry only). LOUIS HAMLET

« From Humble Beginnings to a Life of Duty, Hard Work, and Honor. His Legacy Endures »

An iconic figure of Saint Martin, a respected entrepreneur, passionate football man, and a man deeply attached to his homeland, Louis Hamlet passed away on May 28, 2026, at the age of 86. With his passing, an important chapter in the island's history comes to a close.

There are some men whose lives become inseparable from the story of their homeland. Louis Hamlet was one of them.

Born on September 18, 1939, in Saint Martin, he belonged to a generation that knew the island long before its tourism boom, when roads were still unpaved, resources were scarce, and the future was built solely through hard work and determination. Nothing was handed to him.

Like many Saint-Martiners of his generation, he grew up in very modest circumstances where every achievement was earned through perseverance and sacrifice. Where others saw obstacles, Louis Hamlet saw challenges to overcome.

This philosophy would guide him throughout his life.

BUILDING A LIFE, STONE BY STONE

At an early age, Louis Hamlet entered the construction industry, where he earned a reputation for seriousness, discipline, and quality workmanship. During a period of profound transformation in Saint Martin, he contributed to numerous projects that helped shape the island's development. Driven by a strong entrepreneurial spirit, he later established his own air-conditioning and refrigeration business. As these sectors expanded alongside the island's economic and tourism growth, he gradually became a respected and successful businessman.

His business acumen, deep understanding of the local economy, and commitment to Saint Martin's development led him to become actively involved in the island's commercial community. For several years, he served as President of the Saint Martin Merchants Association, dedicating his energy and experience to promoting and defending local businesses.

FOOTBALL AS A SCHOOL OF LIFE

Yet Louis Hamlet was much more than a businessman. For generations of Saint-Martiners, his name remains closely associated with football.

A passionate player for many years, football occupied a central place in his life.

At a time when resources were limited, sports facilities were scarce, and travel was often difficult, he played an active role in the development of football on the island.

Recognized for his technical ability and understanding of the game, his dedication eventually led him to make history as the first Head Coach of the Saint Martin National Football Team in 1959, helping lay the foundation for a team that would proudly represent the island for generations to come.

For him, football was much more than a sport. It was a school of life.

A COMMITMENT TO HIS ISLAND

While Louis Hamlet devoted most of his life to Saint Martin's economic and sporting development, he also chose to serve his community through public office.

At a time when public service was driven by dedication and a sense of duty, he joined the municipal administration led by Mayor Hubert Petit.

His time on the Town Council was never motivated by personal ambition but by a genuine desire to contribute to the island's future and bring the perspective of a man deeply connected to the realities of everyday life.

Pragmatic and close to the people, Louis Hamlet believed in a simple vision of public service: listening, acting, and remaining committed to the community.

A FAMILY MAN ABOVE ALL

Beyond his professional, sporting, and civic accomplishments, Louis Hamlet was above all a devoted family man. As a husband, father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, he dedicated his life to those he loved. To him, family was not merely a bond of blood; it was the foundation upon which everything else was built.

Throughout his life, he sought to pass on far more than material wealth. He passed on values: respect for others, perseverance, loyalty, solidarity, and the importance of remaining united through both joyful and difficult times.

A generous man by nature, Louis Hamlet believed that success only had meaning when it was shared. The fruits of his labor were consistently reinvested in the well-being of his family, always guided by a desire to provide opportunities and secure a brighter future for the generations that followed.

The legacy he leaves behind extends far beyond material inheritance. It is also a cultural and moral legacy. Through his values, his teachings, and the example he set throughout his life, he leaves an enduring mark on his children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and all who had the privilege of knowing him.

THE LEGACY OF A BUILDER

Today, an entire generation pays tribute to one of Saint Martin's most respected figures.

Louis Hamlet will be remembered as a man of integrity, faithful to his convictions and deeply devoted to his community.

He also leaves behind a timeless lesson:

The greatness of a man is measured not by what he possesses, but by what he builds for others.

From humble beginnings, he devoted his life to building, teaching, and serving.

Though his passing leaves an immense void, his example will continue to guide those who knew him.

As the Apostle Paul wrote:

«I have fought the good fight, I have finished the race, I have kept the faith.»

2 Timothy 4:7

Louis Hamlet has finished his race.

But his story will continue to live on in the memory of Saint Martin.

The French Navy celebrates its 400 years

In 2026, the French Navy celebrates four centuries of history. This quadruple centenary was celebrated in Saint-Martin on Monday, June 1, 2026, aboard the Overseas Support and Assistance Vessel (BSAOM) Dumont d'Urville, docked at the port of Galisbay.

Organized jointly by the prefecture of Saint-Barthélemy and Saint-Martin and the Armed Forces in the Caribbean, this official sequence is part of a year of commemorations deployed across the entire national territory. The objective is to trace the history of the French Navy, but also to better inform the public about its missions. The Armed Forces in the Caribbean (FAA) notably carry out missions of sovereignty, environmental protection, and the fight against drug trafficking in the Caribbean. Starting at 1:30 PM, institutional representatives, as well as civil and military authorities, were able to board the BSAOM Dumont d'Urville. Several official speeches, including those from Navy Captain Thomas Chauveau, interim Vice-Rector Fanny Giausseran, and Prefect Cyrille Le Vély, took place. A guided tour of the ship and a presentation of its missions in the Caribbean region concluded this event.

The American suspected of embezzling 46 million dollars in cryptocurrency to be extradited soon

Arrested last March in Saint-Martin, John Daghita, a twenty-something American suspected of cybercrime, will be extradited to the United States. The investigating chamber of the Court of Appeal in Basse-Terre has authorized this extradition. American authorities accuse him of embezzling approximately 46 million dollars in cryptocurrency. After his arrest, he was placed in provisional detention at the Basse-Terre prison. According to the information provided, John Daghita reportedly requested to be extradited to his home country. His arrest took place at the beginning of March during a joint operation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the research section of Saint-Martin, and about ten soldiers from the GIGN of Guadeloupe.
